INTERESTING FROM WASHINGTON.

Collector Schell Again at the Capital—The Willett's Point Affair—Final Passage of the Army Bill—The Command of the Utah Expedition—Contract for Colt's Arms—Lecompton, &c.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Monday, April 5.

Collector SCHELL has again been dragged from his duties at the receipt of Customs to attend to political and personal exigencies here. I understand that his case is looking brighter, in consequence of concessions made to the New-York Delegation, hitherto resisted, but involving the sacrifice of HORACE F CLARK and his numerous appointees in the Custom-House—who may accordingly prepare for decapitation.

HASKIN, however, is still after the alleged corruption in the Willett's Point affair, and it is the intention of the Investigating Committee to have Mr. SCHELL again examined in a day or two.

You need an explanation of the vote on the Volunteer bill to-day. The House understood General QUITMAN to say that the Military Committee concurred in the Senate amendment reducing the number of regiments to three, and voted accordingly. He afterwards explained that the Committee, as well as the President, desired five regiments, and a large number of members immediately changed their votes; but the explanation came too late, or the programme indicated yesterday might have succeeded.

The appointment of General SMITH as first in command of the Utah Expedition has greatly exasperated General HARNEY, who is determined not to serve as second, and besieged the War Department with his friends to-day to get appointed to a separate command elsewhere. The Department was crowded with officers in great excitement and the Cabinet had a meeting on the subject.

Col. COLT is understood to have made a contract with the War Department for one hundred thousand dollars' worth of his arms.

The Administration men talk of the joining of two South Americans and two Douglas Democrats on the Lecompton question. The other side say that every man is firm. CARUTHERS is expected at Wheeling to-night, and here to-morrow, in time to vote if the bill is up. Otherwise STEPHENS desires to delay taking it up. O.

[FROM ANOTHER CORRESPONDENT.]

The Fort Snelling Committee will meet to-morrow to prepare a report. The majority will probably adopt a resolution directing the canceling of the sale, the return of the first installment of the purchase-money, and the censure of the officers concerned. The minority will report all right, and advise the confirmation of the sale.

The Willett's Point Committee examined witnesses to-day, who testified that the property is worth two hundred and fifty thousand dollars. Postmaster FOWLER testified that the purchase was fair, and the bargain a good one for the Government.

FOLEY and ENGLISH, of Indiana, authorize the contradiction of any reported change in favor of Lecompton.

A bill is soon to be introduced to provide for the raising of five additional regiments of regulars. The two regiments under the bill passed to-day will probably be taken from Kentucky and Illinois. A.

[FROM THE REPORTER FOR THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

WASHINGTON, Monday, April 5.

General SARGENT, of Cincinnati, had to-day a formal interview with the President, and tendered a regiment of Ohio volunteers for service in Utah, supported by a recommendation from the Legislature of that State.

It is understood that Gen. HARNEY protests against being placed second in command under Gen. SMITH, in the Utah expedition, and desires a command in some other direction.

On the representations of General ROBLES, the Mexican Minister, the State Department has reissued its former instructions to prevent the organization or fitting out of unlawful expeditions within the limits of the United States, for the invasion of the Northern States of Mexico. Both Governments in Mexico have written to him on this subject, but he officially corresponds only with the one recognized by our own.

Col. BENTON'S health has materially failed within the last few days. He speaks of his life drawing to a close, converses cheerfully with his friends on public affairs, and says that the only great measure in which the Administration has been successful, is the demonstration of the practicability at all seasons of the year, of the central route to the Pacific.

The Senate has not yet notified the House of its adverse action on the Montgomery substitute. The notice is expected to-morrow.

In the event of the failure of the Kansas bill, under present circumstances, an effort will be made from the Democratic side to couple Kansas with Minnesota, making the admission of one dependent on that of the other.

XXXVth CONGRESS.....First Session.

SENATE....WASHINGTON, Monday, April 5.

Various petitions were presented and referred, among others one from the citizens of New-York in favor of the passage of a general Bankrupt law, and one from the Chamber of Commerce of New-York against the abolition of the Light-House Board.

The joint resolution of the Legislature of New-York in favor of paying revolutionary debts was referred.

A petition from SAMUEL GARDNER, of Brooklyn, N. Y., asking Government to purchase his electric gas-lighting patent, was also referred.

On motion of Mr. BRIGHT, of Indiana, the President was requested to furnish a copy of the instructions to Hon. WM. B. REED, United States Commissioner to China.

A resolution was presented from the Legislature of New-Jersey, asking the President to promote Lieutenant MAURY.

Mr. BROWN, of Mississippi, brought up his Police Bill, for the protection of lives and property in the City of Washington. The bill provides for a patrol force of one hundred men, and numerous stringent regulations.

Accompanying the bill is a report from the Committee on the District of Columbia, which expresses in the strongest terms the state of bloodshed and riot in the city, and throws on Congress the responsibility of maintaining order.

A discussion ensued, in which Mr. SEWARD described the condition of affairs in Washington as a reign of terror.

Mr. DOUGLAS said that we all know that no man's life is safe in the city, even on the most public (Pennsylvania) avenue. There must be a reform, or you will drive the community to a worse alternative, which no one can regard without shuddering.

Mr. FESSENDEN attributed in part the rowdyism to the bad example of men in very high places, and partly to the incompetence of the criminal Judge.

Mr. WILSON would vote for the bill. He made some severe comments on the condition of affairs, and said that the state of things now, is the legitimate fruit of the action of Judge CRAWFORD two years since, when a man was murdered by a member of the House of Representatatives.

The bill to provide one hundred men as a night police to restore order in Washington, which Mr. BROWN reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia, occupied the attention of the Senate for four hours to adjournment. The debate at one time assumed a party tendency, but finally the bill passed with trifling amendments, as reported from the Committee.

Mr. BROWN engineered the bill with persistence and ability.

Every speaker conceded that life and property were unsafe in Washington, and needed protection.

Mr. IVERSON complained that Congress had to feed and clothe citizens of Washington. The only remedy, he said, for the ruffianism, was to make the city a military station for three or four hundred troops.

Mr. HOUSTON hoped that he would never see, nor the youngest children never see the day when a military guard would be patrolling Washington. We want no prætorean guards—no janissaries.

Mr. CRITTENDEN admitted the necessity for action, but would not vote for the bill until the hands of the President and Secretary of the Interior were taken off it.

A lengthened discussion followed as to the proper officer in whom to vest the appointments in chief.

Mr. HALE and other Republicans insisted that the appointments should be independent of politics. He expressed his apprehension that the appointments would be made as partisan rewards and did not like the section authorizing the President to call out temporarily two hundred men, who, he said, could be used for party and election purposes.

Mr. GREEN and Mr. BROWN denied this.

Finally, Mr. CRITTENDEN moved that the appointment be vested in the Chief Judge of the District Court. Motion lost.

Mr. WILSON moved to strike out section 5, which gives the President discretion to call out two hundred extra men on an emergency.

This motion was withdrawn, but was afterwards renewed by Mr. BENJAMIN, voted on and lost. Subsequently it was again made by Mr. STUART, and the clause was stricken out by a vote of 24 against 21.

Mr. BROWN moved that the expense of the force be $75,000.

Mr. IVERSON proposed as an amendment that the city be assessed half the amount. Lost.

A motion by Mr. FESSENDEN, providing that $10,000 be allowed for secret service, was carried.

Mr. JOHNSON, of Arkansas, moved that the bill, as amended, be sent back to the Committee to report at the earliest opportunity, whether the District should not be retroceded to Maryland, reserving the public buildings.

Mr. HALE moved to strike out that resolution.

Both motions lost.

Mr. CRITTENDEN moved that the bill be in force only one year from its passage.

Mr. SEWARD suggested two.

Mr. HALE suggested three, as before that time we would have a new President. Motion lost.

The bill was then passed by 34 Yeas to 9 Nays.

Mr. DOUGLAS reported a bill for the admission of Oregon. Adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WASHINGTON, Monday, April 5.

The House took up the Senate's amendments to the volunteer bill.

Mr. QUITMAN, of Miss., preferred the original number of regiments, but as the troops should move immediately, he would consent to the reduction.

Mr. HUGHES, of Ind., suggested that as Texas was to have a full regiment, New-Mexico ought to have an opportunity to raise one for its own defence.

Mr. OTERO acquiesced in this view, particularly as the regulars were being removed from New-Mexico to Utah.

The House concurred in all the Senate's amendments, which leave it discretionary with the President to accept one regiment of mounted volunteers for the protection of supply and emigrant trains, and the suppression of Indian hostilities. This was agreed to by eleven majority.

On motion of Mr. LOVEJOY, of Illinois, a resolution was adopted, calling on the Secretary of War to furnish full statements respecting the contracts for supplies for the Utah Expedition.

Mr. BURNETT, of Kentucky, offered a resolution, which was adopted, instructing the Committee on Printing to inquire into the propriety of suspending any work ordered by any previous Congress.

Mr. GOODE, of Virginia, reported a bill for the better protection of life and property in Washington, providing for a strong police force, and appropriating one hundred thousand dollars to carry the act into effect. He urged the immediate passage of the bill, in view of the fact that violence, robberies and murders were of daily occurrence.

Mr. COLFAX, of Indiana, asked whether Mr. GOODE could give a guarantee that it will not be a partisan police. He wanted no more such. There had been one already.

Mr. GOODE wanted no politics nor religion mixed in this important question.

Mr. WASHBURNE, of Illinois, thought that Washington should pay its own police expenses.

Mr. LEITER, of Ohio, urged a postponement.

Mr. GOODE wanted to know how many murders will be perpetrated meantime?

Mr. LEITER replied, not more than one and a half per day. Such has been the average.

Mr. GIDDINGS said the greatest performance of the Auxiliary Guard was to catch negroes, and surprising them at church. For one he was opposed to passing a bill for the protection of Slavery and kidnapping in this City.

Mr. KILGORE, of Indiana, had a compromise on which all could agree. Remove the capital, he said, to Indiana and the people there would protect themselves without calling on the Government.

Mr. MORRIS, of Illinois, moved to lay the subject on the table. Negatived, only 32 members voting in the affirmative.

The bill was then referred to the Committee of the Whole on the State of the Union, and will be considered after the Deficiency bill is disposed of.

The House then adjourned.

Anarchy and Crime in Washington—Dreadful Condition of the City—Chargeable to the Party in Power—Cost of the Federal Buildings—The Parks and other Improvements—Proceedings of the Citizens—A Vigilance Committee Talked of.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Monday, April 5, 1858.

The condition of the federal metropolis has became a subject of just alarm to its citizens and a source of discredit to the country.

Mr. BROWN, of Mississippi, in his capacity of chairman of the District Committee of the Senate, proposes to remedy some of the defects of the present Police system by conferring increased power upon the executive division of the General Government. It is said also to be his intention to offer a resolution advising the President in all his local appointments to disregard party distinctions. The advice comes somewhat late, since the appointments are already made and have all enured to the benefit of the ruling party.

The Federal district originally consisted of a tract ten miles square. In 1844 it was mutilated by the cession to Virginia of the part lying west of the Potomac River, although nearly two millions of dollars had been expended for its improvement. The portion remaining is divided between the municipalities of Washington and Georgetown, and the suburban districts called Washington County. It may comprise a population of 65,000 persons. Its surface is dotted with monuments of care and generosity of the Federal Government. The most magnificent buildings of the Continent are here to be found. There is no modern capital in the world more famed for the extent, solidity, costliness, and good taste of its public edifices, aqueducts and parks than Washington. The capitol, now in course of enlargement, will cost over ten millions of dollars; the Treasury building six millions; the Patent Office—which, for classic elegance, grandeur and imposing effect, is not excelled in any country—will have cost, when completed, one and a half millions; the Post-Office two millions. The Washington aqueduct will be the most noble improvement of the kind in the New World, and will cost from five to seven millions. The President's house cost a million and a quarter, and stands in the midst of a most noble park, which resembles in shape and extent the royal parks of London. The public grounds upon which the Capitol and the Executive mansion are situated, are a mile and a half long, and are laid out and planted with all the exquisite skill of DOWNING and the most approved masters of the art in the United States. Two miles from the City is another noble park devoted to public uses, of 300 acres, surrounding the military asylum, renowned for the beauty of the prospect which it commands.

The climate of Washington is mild, equable and temperate. It is very healthy. It is situated two hundred miles from the sea, yet the largest vessels which float have been constructed here, and lie with safety before the city. Such are the natural advantages and the opportunities of Washington. It ought to be the centre of fashion, elegance and social enjoyment. Literary taste, scientific and philosophic knowledge and investigation should find here their chosen seats. This should be the retreat for men of polished minds, refined manners, and the ease and leisure which spring from the combination of intellect, prosperity and social security. This is a feebly-drawn picture of what Washington ought to be.

What it is, would require the genius of DANTE and SALVATOR ROSA combined to describe. It is a pandemonium. There is no other city of the Union, not one, in which the life, the person, and the property of the citizen are so unsafe as in Washington. You speak in disparaging terms frequently of New-York, Baltimore, and New-Orleans. Compared with this place, New-York is a field of Elysium. It has, with its suburbs, 900,000 inhabitants; Washington, with its suburbs, has less than 70,000. Yet I doubt whether there have been so many deaths by violence, so many riots, in New-York as in Washington, during two years. And the whole of this terrible scene of anarchy, crime and confusion, is the result of misgovernment. The social crisis which we have reached is traced, in every candid citizen's mind, to the seditions arising in party contests, and the incompetency and viciousness of those intrusted with the administration of law.

Murder, riot, robbery and arson rule the city. The stalk abroad and take possession of the streets by day and by night. Each week the peaceful and worthy citizen laments the black record of its predecessor, and hopes that the next will bring him the immunity from danger and insult which he formerly enjoyed. But crime grows by what it feeds on, and has now become unendurable. The patience of the community is exhausted. Meetings for Vigilance Committees or other effective means of protection are held all over the city, which are attended by the most solid and substantial men of the place.

Last night a worthy young man was shot dead, on a frequented street. The object of the murderers was booty. On every other day and night of the same week lesser outrages were recorded. Some of them were wanton, the effects of mere native malignity and ferocity of disposition, overflowing from a sense of impunity; others were to gratify political spite, or personal grudges; and a more numerous class were caused by a propensity to pillage.

The young man killed last night was a messenger in the Treasury Department. Near the same spot, three days before, a Clerk in the Interior, a perfectly respectable man, was assailed and shot at by a gang of rowdies. He rushed into the house of a friend. The ruffians besieged the house in force, until they learned by accident that they had mistaken their man. They departed upon the scent of blood in another direction. This was in broad day. Still in the same neighborhood, on the Friday of the preceding week, a faction fight of firemen took place. One young man was killed, and three wounded. On the next night, two citizens were shot by unknown assassins, and one of them desperately, if not mortally wounded, within the shadow of the Capitol. The next day, being Sunday, was the carnival of rioters. They fought through the public streets all day and all night, with firearms, with what result it is not worth while to describe. And each week by itself has a similar or a worse report.

Next to the almost perfect impunity of these crimes, the most singular fact appears to be the boldness and openness with which they are committed. The murders and riots generally occur in the daytime, and the robberies in the gray of the evening. Nobody is safe anywhere, or at any hour.

This fearful state of affairs has been caused by misgovernment and the public toleration of crime. Two years ago a Senator of the United States, known alike for the dignity and gravity of his manners, his talents and his eloquence, was assailed by ruffians in his seat in the Senate-house, and beaten to insensibility. Two skulking cowards remained outside, to aid their principals, in case of necessity. The Courts held the principal villain to answer for a misdemeanor, and imposed a paltry fine. His punishment was a brilliant triumph and an ovation, which lasted as long as his life. That was the beginning of Washington as she stands in April, 1858. On the 1st of June, 1856, the class of men who perpetrated and applauded that crime were permitted to elect Mayor of Washington a man who boasted on the night of his election that he was called a butcher, and he would be found a butcher. He had no qualification for the office but being a "Democrat." That man has made the city a mere den of sedition. He has imported the worst felons, who for years disgraced and afflicted Baltimore, and given the police into their hands. They are the accomplices of the malefactors who have destroyed the public peace. I will say nothing of the election riots and the massacre by Government troops on the first of June, 1857, except that public opinion has settled down into the conviction that they were brought on by the Mayor. The city is Democratic. All effective opposition is crushed out to that party, and yet so shocking has been its misgovernment, that the people are driven to the last expedient of defending themselves. They hope nothing, either from the Municipal Government or Congress. The councils which ought to have applied the remedy, have passed a resolution which calls virtually upon the General Government to help them out by taking the whole care of the City Government upon itself, together with the expenses thereof. This prayer is not likely to be granted. A.

NEW-YORK LEGISLATURE.

SENATE....ALBANY, Monday, April 5.

REMONSTRANCES.

By Mr. SCHELL of the Chamber of Commerce, against increasing the rates of wharfage in New-York and Brooklyn; also of the Chamber of Commerce, against taking from the New-York Common Council the right to regulate the steamboat piers and landings.

REPORTS.

Thirty bills were reported and ordered to a third reading. Among them the most important were as follows:

Amending the law relative to the taxation of Corporations.

To authorize the Boards of Supervisors to correct the Assessment Rolls, when the Assessor cannot.

To incorporate the Germans' Savings Association of the City of New-York.

To extend the charter of the Screw Dock Company.

To incorporate the Great South Bay Steam Navigation Company.

Relative to the drainage of lands in Ulster County.

To regulate the sale of Manures, and to incorporate the New-York Pure Milk Company.

The Senate voted to reconsider the vote of Saturday reducing the tolls on Canals, with the view of obtaining information from the Canal Department.

BILLS PASSED.

To revive the charter of the Albany and New-Baltimore Ship Canal Company.

To amend the revised statutes relative to the partition of lands.

To amend the act extending the jurisdiction of the Courts of General and Special Sessions of New-York.

To organize a State Lunatic Asylum for insane convicts.

To amend the charter of the Brooklyn City Hospital.

Relative to Superintendents of the Poor in Kings County.

NOTICES OF BILLS.

By Mr. NOXON, to provide the means necessary to complete the lateral canals, and secure the navigation of the Erie Canal, with a depth of six feet of water.

To amend the Revised Statutes, relative to the exemption of property from execution on judgments for servants' wages.

Bill repealing Section 3 of the Laws of 1857, relative to fare on the Central Railroad, known as the dime law, was ordered to a third reading by 17 to 7.

The bill to secure to steamboat lines in New-York the use of their old piers, was up before the Senate Committee to-day. Much interest was manifested in the result, by a second lobby from New-York against the bill from the Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. DELANEY and others addressed the Committee against the bill.

The following important bills were referred, to be reported complete:

Relative to the Northern Railroad of New-Jersey.

Relative to refunding head moneys on emigrants arriving at the port of New-York.

To insure the speedy termination of causes in the Court of Appeals.

To incorporate the Central American Commercial and Industrial Company.

Relative to the appointment of Deputy Sheriffs by recommendation of the Governor.

To change the school year, and amend the laws relative to public institutions.

To reduce the capital stock of the Onondaga Bank.

To extend the charter of the Screw Dock Co.

Relating to the superintending the poor in King's County.

REPORTS.

By Mr. SPINOLA, to repeal the law of 1857, relative to reburning charcoal in Brooklyn.

By Mr. DIVEN, adverse to the bill to regulate the salaries of deputies and clerks in the State offices. Laid upon the table.

Bill to repeal the third section of the law of 1857, relative to fare on the Central Railroad, commonly known as half-dime law, was read a third time and passed. Ayes, 19; nays 6.

The Senate in general orders ordered to a third reading the bill to prevent banks of issues and discount to act as savings institutions.

The Committee is now discussing the bill recommended by the Pilot Commissioners to regulate the wharves, piers and slips in the City of New-York.

Mr. DENNIS having the floor, in opposition to the bill, there is no prospect of a vote till very late.

ASSEMBLY....ALBANY, Monday, April 5.

A bill to amend the assessment laws was reported complete.

Mr. BARNES moved to exclude all persons from the floor not having the privilege thereof by the rule and invitation. Adopted.

Mr. ESTY, on a question of privilege, alluded to an article in the Albany Journal, stating that on Friday evening the bill to amend the Emigrant Steerage act had been placed out of its order in the third reading of bills, and calling it a piece of legislative legerdemain; he explained that the bill had by consent been laid aside by its friends in order to allow its opponents, then absent, an opportunity to be present and attend to it. This was the whole of the mare's-nest.

Mr. SMITH rose on a question of privilege, to apologize for a hasty remark which escaped him on Saturday, on the defeat of the Emigrant Steerage bill, when he had congratulated the House on its supporting a pack of thieves.

The Speaker said that the words had not been recognized as uttered within the bar of the House.

BILLS PASSED.

For the relief of the Common Council and Supervisors of New-York of 1857.

To authorize the City of Auburn to convey the armory site to the State.

To amend the act establishing Courts of Civil and Criminal Jurisdiction in Brooklyn.

To provide for the removal of the obstructions from the outlet of Cayuga Lake and channel of Seneca River.

To repeal the Railroad Assessment law of 1857. Passed, by ayes, 82; nays, none.

To extend the charter of the Firemen and City Insurance Companies of New-York.

To amend the charter of the Sun Mutual and Schenectady Mutual Insurance Companies.

To repeal the law authorizing the election of Special Judge of Ulster County.

The afternoon session having been spent in debates on Mr. LAW'S project to form a fund for the completion of the Canals by a transfer of unclaimed dividends from Courts and Banks to the State,

Mr. ARMSTRONG presented a minority report against the measure.

Mr. LAW made an elaborate argument in support of the bill.

The Speaker replied against the bill. Progress was reported.

For the relief of the Onondaga tribe of Indians.

To provide for the enlargement of the Chemung Canal Locks.

To authorize the Harlem Railroad to run by steam to Thirty-second-street.

A motion to reconsider this bill of Messrs. SELLEY and DELANEY was voted down.

To amend the act to develop the resources of the Montezuma Salt Spring.

For the relief of the Westchester County Railroad Company.

To amend the State Woman's Hospital charter.

To declare the Buffalo and Lake Huron Railroad a corporation.

To allow the Buffalo and Pittsburg Railroad Company to consolidate with the Buffalo and Brandford Railroad. Adjourned.

News from Kansas.

ST. LOUIS, Monday, April 5.

The Western mail is very irregular, and Leavenworth papers from the 26th to the 30th ult. have not been received.

In the Constitutional Convention, on the 30th ult., the Committee appointed to frame a schedule reported one. It provides that the Constitution be submitted to a vote of the people on the third Tuesday in May, and that an election for members of the Legislature, Judges and State officers shall be held at the same time.

It also provides that all laws now in force not repugnant to this Constitution, shall remain in full force until they expire by their own limitation. The Bill of Rights is identical with the Topeka bill.

A remonstrance to Congress against the admission of Kansas under the Lecompton Constitution, was read, and a copy ordered to be immediately forwarded to Washington.

SPRING AND SUMMER STYLES, 1858.

A. LELAND & CO.,

No. 180 Broadway,

HAVE NOW IN STORE, AND ARE RECEIVING

From their own manufactory, the largest and most varied assortment of ever offered in this market, and are constantly making additions in the way of New Styles, and shall continue to do so as the season advances, which has been our uniform custom for years, feeling confident that as the season advances our customers will require something different from the stereotyped edition of the month previous; and one thing we would assure our customers, that when we offer a new style they may depend on its entire originality, as we do not offer an old style resurrected with a new name. The well-known superior quality and finish of the goods we have offered for years render it unnecessary for us to do more than submit them to the inspection of the most fastidious taste. We have now in preparation various shades of colors to suit the gradations of the advancing season, and can safely promise to our customers not only originality of design, but variety of style to suite every taste. We would particularly call the attention of the trade to our ample stock of men's and boys' silver gray shades; men's and boys' tan shades; men's and boys' maroon shades; men's and boys' mixed colored Leghorns; men's and boys' mixed colored sewed braids, together with a complete assortment of hats in the natural color, which will be offered at prices as low as any that have been sold at auction.

A. L. & CO. would particularly call the attention of the trade to their large variety of ladies' colored and white riding hats, misses' colored and white bloomers. New shapes children's colored and white hats and caps.

Each shade of color being trimmed with ribbons, &c., imported expressly to match the color of the hat. A. L. & CO. can confidently assert they have never before offered so great a variety of styles, which will be offered at prices that cannot fail to suit the closest trade.

THE FIRST MUSARD CONCERT will take place
MONDAY NEXT, April 12.
THE SALE OF SEATS
commences, therefore, on Thursday,
ENGAGEMENT OF MR THALBERG
And MADAME D'ANGRI,
On MONDAY, April 12, at 8,
will commence
MUSARD'S CONCERTS,
to continue every night during one month,
THE ORCHESTRA engaged for
MUSARD'S CONCERTS,
in addition to the
DISTINGUISHED SOLO PLAYERS FROM PARIS, will be the most stupendous ever presented to an American public, consisting of
ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY PERFORMERS.
To give to these concerts the greatest possible eclat, an engagement has been effected with
MR. THALBERG and
MME. D'ANGRI,
who will appear at the first ten concerts.
THE ACADEMY OF MUSIC has been renovated—a costly carpet has been laid down in the lobbies, and
ONE HUNDRED SOFAS
have been distributed over the corridors.
On the first floor will be found a tastefully decorated
TEA AND COFFEE ROOM,
which will be under the superintendence of Mr. Moffat.
REFRESHMENTS MAY BE ORDERED, to be brought inside the house by TWENTY WAITERS IN LIVERY, who will be stationed in the parquet and balconies.
THE STAGE, WITH THE ORCHESTRA,

Altogether, Mr. Ullman pledges himself that
THE MUSARD CONCERTS

MOST COLOSSAL AND ARTISTIC ENTERTAINMENT that has ever been introduced in America.

THE PRICE OF ADMISSION has been fixed to all parts of the Academy at FIFTY CENTS.

THE SALE OF SEATS
will commence on Thursday, at 9 precisely.
THE FREE LIST IS INVARIABLY SUSPENDED.

TO THE PUBLIC.
Mr. Ullman flatters himself that this undertaking will result in another of those sucesses with which he has been honored at the hands of the public. He has had occasion during the brilliant season that has just expired to make numerous promises and he alludes, with no small self-gratulation, to the fact that he has always strictly fulfilled them. He will do so now.
With regard to Mr. Musard, Mr. Ullman would say that having originated the celebrated promenade concerts at the Hotel d'Osmond, and being bound by contract for the last ten years to conduct the orchestra of the famous opera balls, he has steadily refused all engagements out of Paris. But the demolition of the Hotel d'Osmond gives Mr. Musard a momentary leave of absence, which he improved so far as to accept an engagement to fill up in America the Autumn and Summer season, and to return in time for the carnival festivities of the Winter of 1859.
THE MUSARD CONCERTS
will be given in the
COMPLETEST AND MOST IMPOSING STYLE.
For this purpose an engagement has been effected with MR. THALBERG
who necessarily had to be largely indemnified, as he had to give up his concert tour, which since his arrival in this country has netted him an average profit of $10,000 per month. Mr. Ullman confidently expects that this announcement will be received with enthusiasm, as well as that of MADAME D'ANGRI,
who during the late opera season has risen in public estimation with every fresh appearance she has made, and occupies at the present moment the most prominent place among the cantatrices now in the country.
THE MONSTER ORCHESTRA will be the
GRANDEST, COMPLETEST AND MOST COLOSSAL
that has ever been brought before the American public. It will greatly exceed, both in numbers and quality, the orchestra of the New-York Philharmonic Society and of Jullien's concerts. It will comprise
ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY of the best professors of the City, including
MUSARD'S SOLO PLAYERS FROM PARIS.
Some idea of its extraordinary strength may be formed from the fact that it numbers not less than SIXTY FIRST-RATE VIOLINS,
THIRTY CONTRA BASSES AND CELLOS,
NINE TROMBONES and TWENTY DRUMS, exclusive of the usual number of WIND AND BRASS INSTRUMENTS, such a mass of instruments being required to give due effect to MUSARD'S MONSTER QUADRILLES, as composed by him, and which have earned for him all over Europe the name of LE ROI DU QUADRILLE.
The programme will comprise every evening
TWO GRAND OVERTURES,
THREE MONSTER QUADRILLES, WITH SOLOS.
(1. Plain—2. Descriptive—3. Comic.)
TWO BRILLIANT POLKAS.
(1. Rondo polka, with solo—2. Military.)
AND DESCRIATIVE GALLOP, BY THE MONSTER ORCHESTRA,
relieved by
TWO PIANO SOLOS BY THALBERG,
TWO ARIAS BY MME. D'ANGRI,
A CORNET SOLO BY LEGENDRE, and AN OPHICLEIDE SOLO BY MOREAU.
The expense of these concerts is necessarily very great—greater than that of any Opera company. The Director frankly believes that no Opera season can be made a paying one, unless the price of a ticket be $2; yet as these concerts will be given EVERY EVENING, and as the concert-going public considerably outnumbers the regular patrons of the Opera, he thinks it advisable for his interest to place the general price of admission to
FIFTY CENTS ONLY
to any part of the Academy of Music.
IN CONCLUSION,
Mr. Ullman takes the liberty of addressing himself to the public on a personal matter, with which he certainly would not trouble it if his honor and veracity had not been grossly outraged.
A rumor has been insidiously spread by a person who falsely represents himself as the agent of Monsieur Jullien, to the effect that Monsieur Musard—whom Mr. Ullman presents to the public—is not the same Musard who has been conducting the concerts at the Chateau des Fleurs, the Paris Crystal Palace, the Hotel d'Osmond, and the Opera Balls; and that the European celebrity of the name has never been enjoyed by him, but by his father.
Mr. Ullman flatters himself that the good name he believes to have earned as the manager of Madame Sontag, Mr. Thalberg, Henri Herz, Signor Sivori and of the late Opera season, will be a sure guarantee against a similar deceit being attempted by him; but from what might perhaps be called over-sensitiveness, he begs distinctly to state that, although the father of Monsieur Musard has been a conductor of reputation—just as was the father of Strauss of Vienna—yet the present Musard is the same who, since the last eighteen years, has been monopolizing all the celebrity of the name. He has been the sole conductor of the above-mentioned concerts and balls; he is the composer of the Bœufs et moutons Quadrille, the Zouaves at Malakoff, the Croqueter, the Paillasse, &c. He is the same Musard who made the sensation at the celebrated Bal Costumé given by the Queen of England in 1845—his father, in consequence of a stroke of apoplexy, having retired several years previously.
To corroborate his statement, Mr. Ullman begs to subjoin the following articles:

From the Paris Constitutionnel, (March 4,) by Fiorentino, the celebrated Feuilletoniste.

Here is again news which puts the promenaders in mourning from the café Riche to Tortoni. Musard has been taken away from us by Mr. Ullman, the Director of the Academy of Music at New-York, and leaves for America. We shall no longer see in letters of fire, upon the terrace of the Hotel d'Osmond, that name beloved of belles. Alas! The hotels and the concerts are demolished at one blow. It is said that many widows are about to resume their mourning, and that many demoiselles will suppress their reverences when in the lanciers quadrille they turn towards the orchestra. In fact, without speaking of the genius of Musard, which is acknowledged by all the world, it is true that he was always dressed with extreme elegance, and that he directed his musicians with all the gallantry in the world, holding his baton in the tips of his fingers, smiling to every one with the greatest good humor, and marking the time with the slightest movement of the left foot. He was always standing in the best attitude, (bien pose,) whether his full face was turned to the audience, or whether they could see only his profile on a three-quarter view.
Musard leaves us, then, for the country of the Yankees. It is painful, but in Paris one forgets quickly. One thought, however, preoccupies my mind; and what that is I am going to tell you with my usual frankness.
You are well aware that many young persons who frequented the Concerts Musard were commonly designated by the pretty name of Musardines. What will become of these young girls who are thus suddenly debaptized all at once without their consent? Will they turn their steps towards the "Concerts de Paris" in the Rue St. Honoré? Very well; but what name will they adopt in future? They cannot call themselves Parisiennes, for then they may be confounded with an old enterprise of the citadines (cabs) which, in conformity with the new ordinance, are to run by the quarter of an hour or by the minute.
Get out of it the best way you can. I wash my hands of the whole affair.

From the Paris Entr' Acte, Feb. 28.

The following critique upon "Bon Negre," an operetta by M. Alfred Musard, produced at the Folies Nouvelles, is translated from the Paris Entr' Acte, of February 28:

LE BON NEGRE, AN OPERA BY MUSARD.

Before quitting Paris for America, Musard, king of the quadrille, left a souvenir for his numerous subjects, who will not soon forget him. The operetta of "Le Bon Negre" will certainly be the foundation for a great number of new quadrilles. We may also expect to see upon the advertisement of the balls the polka "Bon Negre Lancelet," redowa composed upon the motives "Du Bon Negre," and perhaps" Musard aux Folies Nouvelles" quadrille with grand orchestra.
It is easy to divine that the partition of M. Musard proceeds from the baton of a chef d'orchestre; it is the music that goes straight to the legs; nevertheless it is exceedingly well written, and very agreeable to the ear; every point is the point of a master. The "Song of the Negro," which piece is full of verve and local color, was the most applauded. The plot is not very complicated, but it is amusing, original, and full of droll situations, &c., &c.

From Harper's Weekly, April 3.

[The editor of this celebrated paper, who, as may be seen from the contents of the article copied, has heard and seen Musard in Paris, is another authority in favor of Mr. Ullman's statement.]

BOHEMIAN WALKS AND TALKS.

MUSARD.—"Fiorentino" has, in one of his latest feuilletons, a great lament for the Musardines, now that Musard has gone to the "country of the Yankees." Now that the Hotel d'Osmond has lost its prime caterer, the condition of its customers is truly pitiable. Who forgets the fiery sign in front of the salon? Who does not remember the various occult games and sports that were practiced in the ante rooms of the concert, the aim whereof (the games I mean) seemed to be to transfer all the small change from your pocket to that of the keeper of the table? The numerous photographs of Musard and his lieutenants, in various shapes; the innocent looking pompiers, in their brass helmets and baggy trousers; the affable sergens de ville, who told you to "move on," with an air that could not be resisted? And the salon itself? What a charming lounge! What a delicious place for the enjoyment of the post-prandial cigar! The hall opening on each side into a garden—one could either listen to the music quietly or promenade, or get away into a quiet corner of the garden, where the melody came softened, like the murmurs of a waterfall. Paris is generally too noisy—there is too much out of doors about it; but the Hotel d'Osmond had many a sly, flirting corner. The price of admission was only nominal—one franc—and every one went. I have seen some of Hall Columbia's proudest and fairest daughters intermixed with the Musardines.

From the Courrier des Etats Unis, the New-York French paper, published April 2.

MUSARD.—Some of our cotemporaries are just now engaged in a discussion which is quite amusing. Is the Musard imported by Ullman, the great Musard, or only his son and counterfeit?
It is very easy to set everybody right. M Musard, who is actually in New-York, is not the founder of his dynasty; but he is not the less the great Musard, as he has inherited from his father a great number of years ago the sceptre, the popularity and the celebrity.
In other words, Monsieur Musard is the authentic Musard of the grand Parisian orchestras.
Mr. Ullman is of the opinion that the indorsement of the Parisian articles by the editors of the well known New-York French paper, who, of course, must necessarily be well posted up, clearly demonstrates the absurdity and falseness of these slanderous insinuations. He has, moreover, made arrangements for the translation and publication of Musard's biography, from the original French of Eugene de Mirecourt, whose series of little books, La Galerie des Contemporains, is well known in this country, and may be had at any foreign music store.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The steamship Indian, from Liverpool on the afternoon of the 24th ult., arrived at Portland yesterday, bringing four days' later intelligence from Europe. On the day previous to the Indian's departure, the United States steam-frigate Niagara arrived at Portsmouth with her machinery slightly damaged. She experienced a succession of heavy southerly gales during the passage out. The British frigate Agamemnon had commenced taking in her portion of the Atlantic telegraph cable. Parliamentary proceedings are devoid of interest. In the House of Commons Mr. Disraeli had given notice that he would move for leave to bring in a bill to reform the Government of India. Parliament was about to adjourn over for the Easter holidays and would not reassemble until the 12th inst. From France we learn that the resignation of Count Persigny as embassador to England had been accepted and that Marshal Pelissier, Duke de Malakoff, had been appointed in his place. The political trials in Italy were closed on the 20th ult. Mazzini and five others were tried, although absent, and sentenced to death. No later news is received from India by this arrival. From China, however, we have some interesting intelligence. France and England will prosecute an expedition against Pekin as soon as the occasion permits. It is understood that the United States and Russia have both backed the Anglo-French demands upon the Imperial Government.

Petitions were presented in the United States Senate, on Monday, from citizens of New-York, for a Bankrupt law; and one from the New-York Chamber of Commerce against abolishing the Light House Board. The joint resolution of the New-York Legislature, in favor of paying Revolutionary debts, was referred. Also, a petition of Samuel Gardner, asking Government to buy his Electric Gas-Lightning Apparatus. The Senate requested the President to furnish a copy of Mr. Reed's instructions as United States Commissioner to China. A resolution was presented from the New-Jersey Legislature asking promotion for Lieut. Maury. Mr. Brown, of Mississippi, brought up the Washington City Police Bill, with a report setting forth the deplorable condition of the city in regard to order and security. Several Senators said no man's life was safe on the streets. Mr. Fessenden thought the bad example of men in high station was producing its effects. Mr. Wilson said this state of things was the legitimate fruit of the course of Judge Crawford two years ago when a member of Congress, who murdered a waiter at a hotel, was allowed to escape with impunity. The bill to provide one hundred men as a night police occupied the Senate four hours, and till the adjournment, and finally passed with immaterial amendments. There was an animated discussion on the bill. It was admitted that the police regulations of the District were outrageous. Mr. Seward said that a reign of terror prevailed. Attempts were made to keep the power of appointing the police force out of the hands of the President, but without success. The final vote on the passage of the bill was ayes 34, nays 9. Mr. Douglas reported a bill for the admission of Oregon, when the Senate adjourned. The House considered the Senate's amendments to the Volunteer Bill, and concurred in them all. The bill was agreed to by eleven majority. A resolution was adopted, on motion of Mr. Lovejoy, of Illinois, calling on the Secretary of War for full statements of all contracts for furnishing supplies for the Utah Expedition. On motion of Mr. Burnett, of Kentucky, a resolution was adopted looking to the suspension of the printing of any work ordered by any previous Congress. Mr. Goode, of Virginia, reported a strong Police bill for Washington City. Mr. Colfax, of Indiana, said he wanted no partisan police. Mr. Giddings said he was opposed to passing a bill for kidnapping and the protection of Slavery in Washington. Mr. Kilgore said if Congress would remove the Capitol to Indiana, the people would protect themselves without troubling the Government. Mr. Morris, of Illinois, moved to table the subject. Lost—Ayes, 35. The bill was referred to the Committee of the Whole, to be taken up next after the Deficiency bill. The House then adjourned.

The State Senate yesterday morning ordered thirty bills to a third reading, and passed half-a-dozen or more. The Assembly also passed a great number of bills, among which was one repealing the Railroad Assessment Law of last year, by a unanimous vote.

The Utah mail to March 1 having been received at St. Louis, we have, telegraphed from the latter place, advices from Camp Scott to that date. Col. Johnston had an effective force of eighteen hundred regulars, and a large number of volunteers, together with one thousand animals in good condition. The men were in fine health, and anxious to commence the march upon Salt Lake City, which place it was believed Col. Johnston would attack, without waiting for reinforcements. Communication with the City was entirely cut off.

Through New-Orleans papers, we have received later intelligence from Northern Mexico. The liberals under Governor Garza were marching upon Tampico, with the full determination of attacking that city, and a severe conflict was anticipated. From Matamoras we learn that the people had been made joyful by the return of their commission, with the welcome decree that their city had been declared a free port for the introduction of every species of merchandise.

Prof. T. B. Hudson, who has occupied the Chair of Mathematics in Oberlin College for the past twenty years, was killed on Thursday evening, by being run over on the Cleveland, Columbus, and Cincinnati Railroad, near the town of Olmstead. His age was 44.

The Connecticut State Election took place yesterday, and resulted, so far as we are able to judge from the latest returns received last night, in the triumph of the Republicans. There were three tickets in the field. The candidates voted for were for Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Secretary of State, Treasurer, Comptroller and Members of the Legislature, and the Republicans and Americans were united upon the candidates for Governor, Lieutenant Governor and Treasurer.

The Board of Aldermen last evening rescinded the resolution authorizing the City Inspector to contract with Forbes and others for cleaning the streets. The resolution (passed 1853) granting to James Murphy and others the right to construct a railroad in Ninth-avenue, was repealed. An ordinance was passed rescinding the resolution giving the Harlem Railroad Company power to run small cars on the Fourth-avenue Railroad.

At the Board of Councilmen last evening the only matter transacted that was other than routine business was the consideration of the special order—the "State Woman's Hospital." It was proposed to concur with the Board of Aldermen in their action, notwithstanding the veto of the Mayor. The first vote was twelve to seven against concurrence, but upon reconsideration, and also without debate the Board concurred with the action of the Board of Aldermen by a vote of sixteen to three. An attempt was made to proceed in the matter of the Orphan Asylum, and to amend the proposed lease by striking out the words "thirty years," and inserting, "so long as the land is used for the specified purpose." But the subject was finally laid over.

Coroner Connery's inquest into the circumstances of the murder of young Samuel, unravels no part of the mystery yet, though yesterday the murdered man's family, and Miss Curtis and her mother, were examined. Edward Smithson, the rival of Samuel for Miss Curtis' affections, was arrested. The inquest is continued to-day.

The General Markets, yesterday, were somewhat less active for Flour, which, however, ruled firm. A good inquiry prevailed for Wheat and Corn; the latter advanced in price. Cotton was moderately dealt in at unaltered figures. The Grocery trade was devoid of animation. Provisions attracted more attention; prices of hog products favored sellers. Linseed Oil was in better request, and was decidedly dearer. No very remarkable movements transpired in other branches of trade.

Kansas Affairs.

The Washington Union is regaling its readers with highly exciting accounts of the opposition of Gov. Chase and other Ohio Republicans to voting in favor of the Kansas bill, with the Crittenden amendment. It represents the Governor as having written very pressing letters to Washington, urging the Republicans in Congress to avoid thus committing themselves to the position that Kansas may be admitted as a Slave State, provided her inhabitants vote in favor of the Lecompton Constitution.

Gov. Chase is not very likely to have written any such letters, or to have counseled any such action, if we may judge from the tenor of a letter he has just written to Kansas. He there regrets that all the Free-State men did not vote for State officers at the January election, and urges them to organize the State Government at once, under the Lecompton Constitution, if Congress should admit the State under that instrument.

Our readers are aware how completely this advice is in accordance with the views which the Times has always entertained upon this subject. We refer to the matter now because it affords additional evidence of the growing predominance of practical counsels in the Republican Party, over the abstract positions which individuals in its ranks may have heretofore occupied. It is undoubtedly distasteful to very many members of that party to vote for the admission of a Slave State, directly or indirectly, under any circumstances. But they have done so, as the least of two evils, in adopting the Crittenden amendment to the Kansas bill. They have declared themselves in favor of admitting Kansas, with a Slave Constitution, if the people of Kansas see fit to adopt one. And they did this to prevent a still greater calamity,—namely, the forcing upon Kansas of a Slave Constitution, whether the people desired it or not.

Whatever may be said in platforms, or preferred by individuals, every political party and every public man must govern his practical action by surrounding circumstances and the exigencies of each case. Politics is emphatically a science of expedients and experiments. While the best must always be aimed at, every public man must very often, indeed always, content himself with voting for the best that is attainable. Society moves forward gradually,—by successive steps,—never by leaps and strides which take no account of intervening obstacles.

If the Republicans, with the Democrats and South Americans, who act with them in Congress upon this Kansas bill, pursue this course steadily and prudently, they will lay the foundation of a policy worthy of the character and destiny of the country.

The State Legislature.

The hundred days, during which the Constitution contemplates the annual exercise of legislative wisdom, draws to a close. That term will end with Thursday of next week, the 15th instant. Ninety days of the hundred have already gone. It is true the conscript fathers may continue still longer in session, provided they will not expect pay therefor—a contingency too improbable to be looked for, though on some few occasions, and to a small extent, it has actually occurred.

Much—we may say most—of the important business remains unfinished, and a portion will doubtless fall through for lack of time. But we hope, whatever may be omitted, neglected and slurred over, that the Registry bill and the measure to take the sense of the people on a Canal Loan, may both be passed. Nothing can excuse or extenuate, in the eyes of an offended people, that disregard of the public interests which could give these subjects the cold shoulder. The days are passing rapidly, and what is done must be done quickly.

The Revival of Business.—The improvement in every department of business continues to be steady and decided. Trade increases in nearly every branch, and it is conducted upon a much safer basis than it has been for the past ten or twelve years. More goods are sold for cash, and where credits are given they are much shorter than before the panic. Nor is it as easy for every merchant from the country to obtain credit as it used to be. More careful inquiries are made and greater pains are taken to avoid loss and heavy accumulation of doubtful debts. The effect of this upon all parties, and upon the general business of the country, is decidedly good.

Nothing affords a better test or more decisive evidence of the increase of business in the City than the increased pressure upon our advertising columns. At no time since The Times was established, have its cash receipts for advertising been so heavy as they are at present. With the solitary exception of the Book Publishing business,—which was the first to feel and seems likely to be the last to recover from the financial pressure,—in every department of trade our advertising is unusually and increasingly heavy.

We shall do what we can to protect our subscribers against an undue trespass upon the space due to reading matter from this source, but must ask their indulgence until our removal into the new Times Building, when we hope that, with increased facilities and space, we shall be able wholly to obviate this increasing difficulty. Meantime we shall do something towards it by declining hereafter to devote the whole of any one of our pages to any single advertiser, except at double the highest of our regular rates. We presume this will furnish an effectual check upon this species of advertising.

A New State—Ontonagon.—The prolific Northwest is apparently about to give birth to another member of the American family of States. We may expect soon to "welcome the advent of a little stranger" on the borders of our greatest lake. It is proposed, in short, that the portion of Michigan lying west of Lake Michigan, and known as the "Upper Peninsula," shall be joined with the northern part of Wisconsin, bordering upon Lake Superior, the two to constitute a new State, bearing the title of Ontonagon.

This movement originates in the right quarters. Michigan passed legislative resolves last year recommending the project, and similar resolutions are now about to be adopted by the Legislature of Wisconsin.

The Constitution of the United States provides that "no new State shall be formed or erected within the jurisdiction of any other State, nor any State be formed by the junction of two or more States, or parts of States, without the consent of the Legislatures of the States concerned, as well as of the Congress." It will in this case only remain to obtain the consent of Congress, that of "the States concerned" being proffered in advance.

Ontonagon is to have for its southern boundary a line drawn from the Menominee River, near its mouth on Green Bay, westerly till such line intersects the western boundary of Wisconsin, near Hudson on the St. Croix River. This line will not be far from the 45th parallel of latitude.

The new State will thus contain 40,000 square miles, nearly equal to the area of New-York. It will embrace the entire southern coast of Lake Superior, and include the rich mineral region which stretches along that vast inland sea. There is already a population of 70,000, which is rapidly increasing, in the territory referred to. These people are anxious to have a government of their own, finding themselves cut off by the peculiarity of their location and pursuits from communication with Michigan or Wisconsin. Unless Congress should interpose objections, which cannot reasonably be apprehended, we see no cause why the new "State of Ontonagon" should not speedily take her place as an independent member of the Union.

Volunteers.—It is rumored that the President intends to accept the services of a regiment of volunteers from New-York for the Utah war. Unless he has some special spite against New-York, we trust he will not inflict upon us this very questionable favor. Our State Treasury is very low, and it is doubtful whether it could survive the draft which another regiment of volunteers would make upon it. We have not yet recovered from the cost of volunteering for the Mexican war. Some eleven years have elapsed since that war closed, and not a single Legislative session has passed without urgent applications for the appropriation of money for the relief of the New-York volunteers. How many thousand dollars have been voted and paid to them we are not aware:—but the sum total would exceed considerably the entire cost of maintaining quite as many regulars in the field.

But the end is not yet. Gen. Burnett, who had the good luck to be promoted by President Polk from a Post-Office clerkship to a command in this regiment, and who reaped an indefinite amount of glory from his achievements in the war, is now an applicant to the Legislature for money to reward him for having raised the regiment. We trust there is no danger that the Legislature will grant this very modest request:—but the application shows the danger the State incurs from having any of her citizens "volunteer" to serve their country.

Crime in the City.—The extent to which crime prevails in this City, and the impunity which seems to attend it, are becoming very alarming. Murders and robberies in the open streets are of almost daily occurrence. It seems incredible that in large cities like New-York and Brooklyn, with lighted streets, costly police and all the machinery of civil government, such crimes should be so common. There must be some radical defects in our Police arrangements.

City Items.

Some three or four months ago a revival commenced in the Methodist Church in One Hundred and Twenty-fifth-street, and has continued with more or less vigor until the present time, resulting in the conversion of over one hundred persons. Last Sabbath the pastor of that church, the Rev. Mr. Washburn, baptized seven men and women in the Harlem River, in the presence of several thousands of persons, attracted by the novelty of Methodists administering baptism by immersion. The Baptist Church there has also partaken largely of the revival spirit, and for several successive Sabbaths have baptized large numbers in the Harlem River. Their pastor, the Rev. Mr. Wilds, will also baptize a number next Sabbath at the same place. A daily union prayer-meeting is held in one or other of the churches in the village between 4 and 5 o'clock P. M. But, notwithstanding the religious feeling so generally prevailing, the Harlem Baptist Church has been broken into twice during the last two weeks, and robbed of carpets, pulpit drapery and other things.

Yesterday was the first of the April term in the Courts, and in most of them but little was done, except to open and organize. In the Supreme Court this term, Justice Sutherland will hold the circuit. The Special Term, enumerated motions, will be held by Judge Clerke, while Judge Davies attends to the ex parte business. In the Supreme Court, the General Term will be held by Judges Hoffman, Slosson and Pierrepont. Judge Woodruff will sit at Special Term, and Judge Bosworth at Trial Term. Judge Bosworth has been much benefited by his Southern trip, and anticipates being able to endure even the heat and foul air of our miserable trial term rooms. Judge Duer has so far recovered as to be able to walk about supported by a crutch. He has devoted much of the hours of his convalescence to an examining into the cases argued before him.

The April Term of the Court of General Sessions commenced yesterday before the Recorder. A Grand Jury was not empanelled, a quorum being wanting. David Fox pleaded guilty to assault and battery on Thomas Malone, on March 13; and Henry W. Meyer pleaded guilty to an assault and battery on John Green on Feb. 8. In each case, sentence was reserved till the last day of term.

In the Court of Oyer and Terminer yesterday the case of Martin Dowd, charged with the murder of Dooley on Feb. 7, was ordered back to the Court of General Sessions. The Grand Jury were discharged for the term, and the Petit Jury ordered to appear on Wednesday, when the cases of Mahoney, charged with the murder of Hamilton in Canal-street, and of Wogan, charged with the manslaughter of Cassidy and Kennedy, will be taken up, and a day assigned for their trials. The third trial of Cagney for the murder of Policeman Anderson in July last, was set down for this week, in the Supreme Court Circuit, but owing to the illness of the Attorney-General, it is further delayed for a short period.

The Rev. Mr. Corey's (Baptist) Church, corner of Fifth-avenue and Thirty-fifth-street, has been sold to the Episcopalian Parish of Christ Church, worshipping now in Eighteenth-street, near Fifth-avenue. The Easter election of Wardens and Vestrymen, in the latter Church, on Monday, resulted as follows: Senior Warden—Frederick J. Austin. Junior Warden—J. Gardner Ambler. Vestrymen—James Litton, George W. Farnham, Isaac Mix, Jr., William L. Wallace, Richard Sill, William H. Lee, James M. Constable, William Barton.

Madame Lola Montez lectured on "Lola Montez" last night to a large audience in Hope Chapel, and her full, true and particular account of that celebrated lady, her birth and parentage, (recently so scandalously misrepresented, she said, by a certain fugitive from the gallows,) her fortunes, misfortunes and adventures, was received with frequent manifestations of favor and applause. Her narrative last night came down to the period immediately preceding her appearance at the Bavarian Capital, and will be concluded on Monday night next.

The Scott Life Guards will make their first appearance in uniform, on next Thursday evening, at the Colossal Charity fete, which is to come off at the Crystal Palace. This organization consists of soldiers who were in the Mexican war. Their first street parade takes place on the 19th of April, to celebrate the 11th anniversary of the battle of Cerro Gordo, where our army met with a severe loss; but, as some recompense, we captured 5,000 Mexican soldiers, three Generals, 5,000 stand of arms, and Santa Anna's carriage with $10,000 and his wooden leg in it. The purpose of the Scott Life Guard is the promotion of the mutual welfare of its members.

A meeting of Mechanics and Workingmen opposed to the attempted removal of the Dry Docks to Jersey City, was held in Pike-slip last night. A temporary platform was erected there, from which the meeting was addressed by Daniel Cogee, who was appointed Chairman, James McMahon, Charles Smith, and Dr. Snodgrass. A series of resolutions opposing the removal of the Dry Docks was adopted.

The steamship Moses Taylor, United States mail line, Capt. McGowan, sailed yesterday at 2 o'clock, with the California mails, and the usual number of passengers. The next steamers of this line are the Philadelphia to sail on the 17th, and Star of the West on the 20th inst. The abrupt termination to the opposition has disappointed many persons who in California had engaged passages for friends to come out by it.

Constable Carpenter of the Fourteenth Ward, was terribly beaten in Baxter-street, about 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, while attempting to dispossess a Mr. and Mrs. Pzos. Mrs. and Mrs. P. and their sympathising neighbors assailed the constable with bricks, and he would have been killed had not the police interfered. As it was, his head was badly cut, and his eyes blackened. Mrs. Pzos is in custody.

The Tammany Society did not meet last evening at Tammany Hlal (though it was their regular meeting night) because, as they said, their room was being used for a ball. The Forrester portion of the Society denounced the thing as a trick and subsequently met at Garrick's in Chatham-street and further arranged for the trial of strength between the factions which will take place shortly in the election of Sachems.

Captain De Camp, of the Fourth Ward, and a force of men, made a descent late last night upon Johnson's negro dance cellar in Rosevelt-street, a notorious place. All the inmates—about 60 in number—were captured, including four white women and six white men. The cells were packed, but a few of the prisoners were allowed to go clear for want of room.

Shortly after 10 o'clock last night a fire broke out in the building No. 161 Duane-street, occupied on the first floor by P. U. Morgan, dealer in spices and coffee, and on the second by J. T. Mesa, printer. The loss in Mr. Morgan's place amounted to about $1,000, and in Mr. Mesa's to $500. The building was damaged to the extent of $500—all insured.

Last evening, in the St. Nicholas Hotel, the sons of St. Nicholas met according to immemorable custom, to celebrate the Paas festival, in which, of course, they succeeded to their entire satisfaction, by the aid, among other things, of those venerable concomitants, long pipes and dyed eggs, to say nothing of the Holland gin.

The largest audience ever convened in the Nineteenth Ward assembled Sunday at the foot of Fifty-fifth-street, East River, to witness the immersion of twelve persons by the Rev. Messrs. Nott and Bromley.

Brooklyn Items.

Every citizen of Brooklyn who does his duty will stop long enough to vote before going to business this morning. An Alderman, a Supervisor and a Constable for each Ward, and an Assessor, (for each of the oddly numbered Wards,) are to be elected. The issues are of great local importance. The gas and railroad monopolies, the swill-milk and cow-stable nuisances, the outrageous and unequal taxation of the Wards, are all to be settled by the day's work. And besides, it is to be determined whether good men are to rule the city or bad men, even if through very worthy officers as their supple tools. All sensible men who can will vote; and all wise voters will vote early.

Another bold attempt at highway robbery was made on Sunday evening, between 11 and 12 o'clock. Mr. John Gorman was walking in Grand-street, when he was attacked by a ruffian, who demanded his money. Fortunately, Officer Martin, of the Fifth Precinct, was near at hand, and arrested the robber and locked him up, but not until after a desperate struggle on the part of the prisoner to escape. He gave his name as John Rufus, and was yesterday committed to answer.

The case of E. D. Culver against Deacon Westervelt, of the First Baptist Church, was again before the Supreme Court yesterday, on a motion made by defendant's counsel to vacate the order requiring him to appear and be examined before Judge Morris. The decision was reserved.

The Coroner's jury in the case of Barney Foy, supposed to have died from injuries received at the hands of two men who robbed him on the highway a few days previous to his death, have rendered a verdict exculpating the accused.

In the case of James McGuire, supposed to have been murdered, (whose body was found at the foot of Carroll-street,) the inquest has been adjourned till next week.

Yesterday the Police of the Sixth Precinct arrested Andrew Quirk for participating in the recent riot at the Ridgewood Reservoir. He was committed to answer.

During the 48 hours ending yesterday morning the Police made 82 arrests, and during the same period of time 68 persons were accommodated with lodgings at the different stations.

A party of four well-known vagabonds went about in the Second Ward, early yesterday morning, and pasted paper over the names of all the candidates in opposition to the regular Democratic ticket.

It is said that the Vigilance Committee recently held a meeting at the house of Ex-Mayor Hall, to take action relative to the murder of young Samuel.

Coroner Snell held an inquest yesterday on the body of Thomas M. Jones, at No. 79 Hoyt-street. The Jury rendered a verdict of death by intemperance.

An infant child of Mrs. King, on Bond, near Dean street, was suffocated in bed on Sunday night. A verdict of accidental death was rendered.

A deaf and dumb man, supposed to be George Evans, of No. 193 Monroe-street, New-York, died suddenly at No. 1 Grand-street, yesterday morning.

The Body found in Jamaica Bay.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

Jamaica, Monday, April 5, 1858.

The body found floating in the water, near the Sea-Side House on Jamaica Bay, on Sunday morning, is five feet, seven inches in height, and has sandy hair, whiskers and moustache, and a light complexion. It was dressed in black cassimere pantaloons, marked "W. C. McKee," a shirt marked "W. C. McK.," and boots nearly new. It had no coat or vest on. There are two wounds—one a very deep one—on the left side of the face, over the left eye, which the Doctor says were the probable cause of his death. I think he has been shot. Twenty dollars in gold was found in his right-hand pantaloons pocket, so that it is not likely that gain was the object of the person who took his life. There is little doubt that the body was that of W. C. McKee, brother-in-law of Harbor-Master King. He had been mysteriously missing several days.

THE MURDER OF YOUNG SAMUELS.

One of the Prisoners Discharged—More Mystery—The Murder Believed to have been Committed by a Rival Lover—Testimony of Miss Curtis, her Mother, and the Samuels.

The Coroner's Investigation in this case was resumed at 11 o'clock yesterday morning at the Second Ward Station-house. As on the previous days of the examination there was a large attendance of spectators and friends of the deceased. The following is the additional evidence:

Patrick Katon, one of the prisoners arrested on suspicion of the murder, was first called, and testified as follows: I live at No. 20 Cherry-street; I am employed in loading and unloading shipping; the first time I ever saw the deceased was when the body was taken by my cell door; I did not see Mr. Curtis last Wednesday, during the day or evening; I heard of the murder last Friday morning, about an hour before I was arrested; Officer Kline, of the Second Ward, arrested me; he asked me when I last saw Curtis, and I told him about a week before; he called another officer, and I was brought to the Station-House; during the absence of the officer I passed over to Curtis' oyster stand and asked him, "Tom, how is this? The officers are asking me about you, you have been doing nothing wrong, have you?" Immediately I was taken into custody; on Wednesday night last I was home, and went to bed at half-past nine o'clock.

Wm. Kline, sworn—I am attached to the Second Ward Police; I arrested Katon last Friday; several gentlemen told me that he had been seen the previous evening in the company of Curtis, and that he had acted very suspiciously; some one told me that Katon had been seen in company of the deceased; Captain Davis and Mr. Billings were among those who told me that Katon was with Curtis and the deceased.

John Collins, sworn—Katon worked with me all day last Wednesday and Thursday; I missed him on Friday, and on inquiring where he was, learned that he had been arrested; I have known him nine years, and he has always been a sober and inoffensive man.

Michael Kennedy, sworn—I live at No. 20 Cherry-street; Katon lives in my house; I saw him home last Wednesday evening at six o'clock, and at half-past nine o'clock, at which hour he went to bed; I locked the door after he retired; he could not have left the house before the next morning without my knowing it.

Upon reviewing the above evidence, offered with regard to Katon, the Coroner and Jury were of opinion that no ground existed for his further detention, and he was accordingly released.

Charles Samuel, the father of the deceased recalled: The last time I saw my son alive, was a week ago Saturday evening, at eight o'clock; it is possible he may have had some $15 on his person when he went away from home; he told me that he was going to see his girl, naming Miss Curtis; I have made every effort to ascertain in whose company he was on Saturday night; he always kept good company; when I missed him at breakfast, I thought nothing very strange of it; on his not appearing on Monday morning, I sent to Mrs. Curtis to learn if he had been there, thinking it possible that he might have remained there; Mrs. Curtis told my daugter that Charles has told her that a rival of his had threatened to injure him if he appeared again at her house; I don't know the name of the person who uttered the threat; Mrs. Curtis told me that she asked my son if this threat had been the cause of his staying away so long, and Charley told her, "No, I am afraid of nobody;" this rival, about a year ago, used to call frequently on my son; he borrowed some money of Charley, and a lot liking the young man, I told my son he ought not to cultivate his acquaintance, and he accordingly gave him the cold shoulder; I have been told that Miss Curtis has been heard to say, since the murder, "Is it possible he could have done it?"—referring to the rival.

Edwin W. Belcher, sworn—I live in Clinton-avenue, Brooklyn; I was frequently in the company of the deceased; the last time I saw him was about three weeks ago; I knew of no attachment existing between him and a young lady; he never told me that any one was at enmity with him, or had threatened his life; I heard it stated at the funeral yesterday that a person had been heard to utter threats against the deceased; young Samuels was of a remarkably quiet and peaceful nature; I met him more frequently at the Gymnasium than elsewhere.

Francis E. Howard, sworn—My place of residence is No. 19 Monroe-street, Brooklyn; I was acquainted with the deceased; I met him more frequently at the Gymnasium than elsewhere; I have not seen him for three weeks past; once or twice I saw him in the company of Miss Curtis; I don't know any of his associates who saw him after the Saturday he left his father's house.

Alfred Ryan, sworn—I live in Clinton-avenue; the deceased was an associate of mine; he never mentioned to me that he was paying his addresses to any young lady; since his murder I have heard persons state that they believed he was murdered in Brooklyn; it is nearly three weeks since I last saw the deceased.

Robert P. Wintington, sworn—I am a Policeman of the Second Precinct; some person asked me on Friday last if I could tell him where the dead-house was; I told him I believed there was one at the City Hospital, and one at Bellevue Hospital; he then asked me where the body of young Samuels was, and I informed him that it was at the Second Ward Station-house; I asked him if he knew the deceased, and he replied that he did, and that he was a very quiet, good fellow; he also said he knew the young lady, and that he had understood another young man was paying attentions to her, and that he was a passionate, fiery young fellow; I don't know whether he came to the Station-house or not to see the deceased; he was tall and wore side whiskers.

Julia Victoria Samuels, sworn—The deceased was my brother; the last time I saw him was a week ago last Saturday; I was not at home when he went away; I did not know of his being attached to a young lady; he showed me the likeness of Miss Curtis on the Thursday previous; he asked me if she was not pretty, and that was about all that was said; I saw Mrs. Curtis on the Monday evening after my brother was missing; she was much agitated and said she was afraid something dreadful had happened to him; she said Charley staid at her house Saturday night till about 11 o'clock; she did not say whether any one else was there or not; it was raining when he left, and she said she offered him an umbrella, but he did not take one; she watched him till he passed Washington-street around Tillary-street; he promised to come around the next day and go to church with her and her daughter; the second time I saw her was after hearing of the death of Charles; she then said, "Is it possible he could have done it?" she appeared to have something on her mind; she mentioned the name of Smithson as the one she suspected; she said Charley and Smithson had had a falling out, and that Smithson had threatened Charley; I cannot say positively that she said it was Smithson whom she referred to, but Smithson was the only name she mentioned; she said it was time Smithson was in port; I have seen Smithson, Miss Curtis and Charles walking in the street together.

Mrs. Anne Samuels, sworn—The last time I saw my son was on Saturday, a week ago; I did not know till after breakfast on Sunday but that he was in bed; knowing that he was in the habit of visiting a Miss Curtis, I sent my younger son to her house to learn if she knew where he was; when word was brought that they had not seen him since eleven o'clock the evening previous, I made up my mind that he must have staid over-night with some of his acquaintances in Clinton-avenue; on Sunday night Mrs. Curtis sent her servant girl to inquire if we had yet heard where Charley was; on Monday, Mrs. Curtis called herself at our house; she seemed surprised at my husband's taking Charley's absence so coolly; she said something dreadful had happened to him; she was much agitated, and fainted away; she said she had had a dreadful dream about murder; this disturbed me very much, and I told her I had had a shocking dream; on Friday she called again; she threw her hands wildly about, crying, "O, Lord, it is him, it is him—God forbid that I should judge him wrongfully;" she did not say whom she referred to; at this time we had not learned that Charles had been found; my son did not tell me that he was engaged to Miss Curtis.

Mrs. Sarah Maria Curtis, sworn—I live at No. 28 Tillary-street, Brooklyn; I knew the deceased; he was in the habit of visiting my house; he paid his attentions to my daughter; the last time I saw him alive was on Saturday evening, the 27th of March; he left the house about eleven o'clock; I did not see him, but heard him as he went away; there was no other young man in the house that night; about a year ago a young man named Smithson used to visit at my house; he and the deceased sometimes called together; at the time Smithson visited the house I knew of no unkind feelings existing between them; Mr. Samuels told me they were not on good terms; I was asking the deceased if he had seen Mr. Smithson lately and he said he had not; I asked him if he knew what Mr. Smithson was doing, and he replied that he believed he was on a steamship; the deceased said that he had understood that Smithson had threatened him if he had supplanted him with Sarah; the threat seemed to me very foolish, as Smithson was only a boy sixteen years of age, and Sarah only fifteen; on hearing that young Samuels had not been seen at home since leaving my house; the thought occurred to my mind whether he had an enemy; at Mr. Samuels' house on Saturday evening last some one asked for the daguerrotype of Smithson; I then said "It can't be possible that one so young as he could commit such a dreadful murder;" on Tuesday afternoon I told Mr. Samuels that I had a painful impression the night before that he was then in great peril; I heard first on Sunday evening that he was missing; I felt very anxious in the matter and became nervously excited.

By Jurors—I cannot give the conversations I had on Friday, either with Mrs. Samuels or her daughter; I understood from Mrs. Samuels that the threats uttered by Smithson were not made to him personally, but came to him second-hand; Smithson I understood had borrowed money of the deceased, and had not paid it; Smithson was always pleasant when I saw him; I knew nothing as to his habits; I never heard of any rivalry or jealousy between him and the deceased; the last time I saw Smithson was a year ago last November; he had discontinued his visits two months previous to that.

Sarah Curtis, sworn—I reside with my mother at No. 28 Tillary-street, Brooklyn; I knew Charles L. Samuels; a week ago Saturday evening was the last time I saw him; he went away about eleven o'clock; on Sunday morning at nine o'clock I first heard of his absence from home; when I heard of his death I did not think of any one that would be likely to have murdered him; I knew Mr. Smithson; it is about sixteen months since I saw him; he used to visit me in the company of the deceased; I know of no unpleasant feeling existing between the two; I was not present when the deceased told my mother of Smithson having uttered threats against him; my mother mentioned the threats since the murder; I know Miss Drew; I know of Mr. Smithson visiting her; I have never seen or heard of Smithson since a year ago last November; we did not part on friendly terms; I did not like him as an associate and I dismissed him; the name of Mr. Samuels was not alluded to, as the cause of my discarding him; Smithson never said anything derogatory to the deceased; Mr. Samuels and myself were engaged to be married; we were to wait till he was of age before being married; Smithson called to see me once after I discarded him; I received him very coolly; my mother was present during his visit; there may have been some conversation about Samuels visiting the house; I never had any daguerreotype of Smithson nor he one of me, to my knowledge.

By a Juror—I have heard it said that Smithson was dissipated; he did not part with Miss Drew on good terms; it was not the deceased who spoke in a derogatory manner of Smithson; when the deceased left me at the door he started in the direction of his home; I watched him till he got out of sight; he was to meet me the next day at Trinity Church; he engaged positively to come and see me Sunday morning; he has never failed to keep his engagements with me; I know of no one who was hostile to him; several young men were occasional visitors at my house, among the visitors were Mr. Merritt of New-York, Dr. Sands of New-York, and Lawrence Clark of Pierrepont-street, Brooklyn.

The further examination of witnesses was here adjourned till 11 o'clock this morning.

Edward Smithson, the young man above spoken of as the rival of Mr. Samuel, was arrested and taken to the Second Precinct Station-house yesterday afternoon. He is only about 17 years old; is a mild-looking young man. He expresses much mortification at the notoriety which he has obtained in connection with this affair. He has been employed as assistant steward on board the Collins steamer Atlantic. He says that a few moments explanation before the Jury to-day will set matters right so far as he is concerned.

The prisoner Curtis had the delirium tremens last night at the Second Precinct Station-house. He tore his clothes off, fancying that snakes were crawling inside of them, and then insisted on having his under garments washed that they might be rid of all traces of the reptiles.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

The most reasonable solution of the mystery as to the motive that led to the murder of young Samuel, I think the following:

His associates say that he was vain and conceited, and very fond of display. He was particularly fond of making a display of money, and was known to carry considerable of the "queer," or shop bills, resembling bank bills. These he would display as good money. He took particular pride in inviting his associates to take cigars, oysters, &c., and when paying for the same would pull out a roll of the "queer," roll it about carelessly, and eventually extract from the tempting pile a good one dollar bill, and pay for what they had purchased.

Now, let any eccentric young gentleman go into the bar-rooms along the East River, either side, or anywhere in New-York, late at night, and make such a display of money, how long before he would get picked up? Not long, I am sure, even if sober.

Samuel attempted to commit suicide when about 12 years of age, by taking laudanum. He was found insensible in the street. The other reported attempts to commit suicide are not well authenticated. G.

FRENCH WHITE ZINC PAINT,
MANUFACTURED BY THE VIEILLE MONTAGUE COMPANY, OF PARIS.

Consumers of Paint throughout the United States are invited to test the advantage of this Paint over that made from Lead—

FIRST—It is a clear and brilliant white, surpassing Lead in color as well as durability.

SECOND—It does not contain poisonous acids, which render apartments newly painted with Lead so unwholesome, causing painters' colic, &c., &c.

THIRD—It will not change color by exposure to bad air or gases, so that it lasts longer than Lead.

FOURTH—Although its first cost is rather greater than that of Lead, it will prove more economical in the end.

This Zinc can be used for old or new work wherever a durable pure white paint is wanted.

It should not be adulterated with American Zinc, as it renders it thin and injures the color.

Parties who desire to use this beautiful Paint may obtain information where it can be procured pure and unadulterated by applying to the Agents of the Company.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

SIR: It is sad to look over the weekly bills of mortality published by you, and observe how large a proportion of deaths occur from diseases which might, and ought to be cured. It is not necessary that consumption and bronchitis and Asthma should sweep so many to the grave as they do,—that disease of the heart should so frequently and suddenly cut down its victims,—that so large a proportion of our people should continue miserable invalids without being able to find relief—to be early laid aside as broken wrecks, and to find an early grave. Because these classes of invalids do not find a cure, or even relief, under the unfortunate methods of treatment ordinarily pursued, they should not conclude that their diseases are incurable. Having devoted my whole time and attention for many years to chronic complaints, with the opportunity of testing the efficacy of what I regard as a correct treatment in over fifty thousand different cases, I know these diseases are in most instances curable.

For the benefit of these invalids, I deem it my duty to call their attention to this treatment, and to present some evidence that it is really worthy of their notice.

The following letter is from a prominent gentleman and member of Congress from this City, the Hon. JOHN KELLY, whom I have had the pleasure of relieving of a dangerous affection of the heart which threatened his life:

Letter from the Hon. John Kelly, Member of Congress from New-York City.

NEW-YORK, Nov. 24, 1857.

MY DEAR SIR: Supposing that others, afflicted as I have been, may be benefited by the knowledge and use of your remedies and treatment, I am induced to write you this communication. You may make any use of it you deem proper. For a number of years I had been afflicted with what I supposed to be a disease of the heart: at times I have had great distress in the region of the heart and left side, occasionally violent palpitation and fluttering of the heart; the circulation of the blood seemed to be slow and obstructed in some way; my digestion was very imperfect; I was nervous and despondent; was troubled with headache very much, and had turns of a sinking faint, prostrate feeling, which were distressing, and alarmed me. Having tried numerous remedies, as recommended by physicians, and without any apparent benefit, I gave up all hopes of obtaining relief, when I was advised by a friend of mine to call upon you, as he felt confident that you would be able to relieve me. I am glad to inform you that his predictions have been fully verified. The medicines and treatment you prescribed for my case have had well nigh a miraculous effect upon my system. I am now nearly restored to my former usual good health and, by the aid of your remedies, and the help of a kind Providence, I hope finally to be completely so. I would most certainly recommend your treatment to any who may be afflicted as I have been. Very truly yours,

JOHN KELLY, M. C.

DR. S. S. FITCH, No. 714 Broadway.

The following is from a lady residing in Ulster County, whom it has been my good fortune to cure of consumption:

Letter from Mrs. G. D. L. Montanye, of Ulster Co., N. Y.

SHANDAKIN, Ulster Co., N. Y., Jan. 29, 1857.

DR. S. S. FITCH—Sir: Two years ago last month I was attacked with hemorrhage of the lungs, and raised from three to four quarts of fresh blood in one week, which prostrated me so that I was obliged to be lifted out and in my bed. Under the care of a neighboring physician I recovered so as to be able to be up and around during the Winter, but was unable to do anything worth mentioning, and continued to raise a little blood, accompanied with a great deal of pain in my side and a severe cough. In the Spring I had another severe attack, which again brought me down to my bed. I applied to various physicians—all of whom afforded me only temporary relief. I was then recommended by the Rev. H. C. Longyear to write to you and procure your remedies—he having previously derived benefit from your treatment—and which I was at length induced to do, but not before I had again had an attack of it in the Fall. On receiving my letter stating my case to you, you immediately forwarded your medicines, together with your other remedies, which I received in January (that is one year ago this month,) and which I immediately commenced using, by which I gradually improved under your treatment, though I had a slight attack of hemorrhage in the Spring; but that I think came from overdoing myself. Since then I have been slowly improving, and am now enjoying better health than I or my friends ever thought I would again. If this simple statement of my case, and the benefit derived, by the blessing of God, from your treatment, will be of any service to you, or any one else, to put themselves under your treatment, I shall be very glad.

Yours respectfully, GERTRUDE D. L. MONTANYE.

CONSULTATION.—Permit me to add that I prefer to receive a visit from my patients, and have the opportunity of a personal examination, if possible. But this is not absolutely necessary. I have so arranged my practice and remedies that I can treat patients at a distance, sending the remedies by express and conducting the treatment by letters, on the receipt of a full statement of the condition of the patient, with all the symptoms.

THE WINTER'S MORN.

BY WM. B. WILLIAMS.

Driffing in fury o'er hill and dale,
The snow storm comes on the pitiless gale;
The bleating flock is safe in the fold,
But the cheerless wanderer shivers with cold,
And the household robin, with breast of red,
Taps at the cottager's door for bread.

The streamlet, by icy fingers bound,
Has ceased to charm by the lull of sound,
And earth, so fair in her bridal dress,
Appears like grief in her deep distress.
Wherever our thoughts take wing and fly,
Silence alone reigns, spell-bound, nigh.

OR

WAIFS ON THE SEA OF HUMANITY.

A ROMANCE OF EVERY-DAY LIFE.

BY FRANCIS S. SMITH.

CHAPTER I.
STARVATION.

The story opens with a Winter morning scene in the great City of New-York. The first characters introduced are Mr. Seymour, a rich man, and a poor boy, who is anxious to earn a trifle by shoveling the snow off the sidewalk in front of the rich man's mansion. Mr. Seymour at first sends the boy away penniless, but he soon regrets his hasty action, and meeting the boy again an hour subsequently, he furnishes him with a small sum of money, with which the boy rushes off. Mr. Seymour watching him. The boy enters a baker's shop near by and suddenly emerges with a loaf of bread in his hand, from which he tears a mouthful and starts off on a run. Satisfied that he is really in want, the rich man is impelled to follow him, and eventually he traces him to a tenant-house, and what he there witnessed is described by the author as follows:

The room he looked in upon was a small one, and from its position the light of day, except at meridian, (it was about 3 o'clock then,) was almost excluded. The floor was cleanly scrubbed, the walls were white and the window-panes, what few were left, glistened brightly in the sunlight, but save a clean board which, resting upon a barrel, served as a table, and a bed which occupied the darkest corner of the room on the floor, the apartment contained no furniture.

Sitting bolt upright upon this latter article was a woman, wasted away almost to a skeleton. In both her bony hands she clutched a loaf of bread, from which she had ravenously torn a mouthful, and lying prone at her side, with his face buried in the pillow, and groaning and sobbing piteously, was the boy whom the rich man had followed.

Mr. Seymour was unable to scan the woman's features closely, for the bright glare of the sun upon the snow without had temporarily unfitted his eyes to view objects in a subdued light, but he saw enough to shock him greatly, and stooping down he placed his hand upon the shoulder of the boy, and shaking him gently, he said in a kindly tone:

"Get up, my little man, and run out for some more fitting food than that. You shall want for nothing now, for I will be your friend. See, here is money!" And as he spoke he took some silver coins from his pocket.

Rising from his recumbent position as the first tones of the gentleman's voice fell upon his ears, the boy turned and faced the latter, who was surprised to see upon his features, not a look of gratitude, but an expression amounting almost to malignity.

"Go away!" exclaimed the boy, bitterly, "go away and leave me alone. I hate you!"

"And why shou'd you hate me, my poor lad?" inquired Mr. Seymour, in a tone of unfeigned surprise—"I never injured you!"

"You have," exclaimed the boy, passionately, "you have always injured me, and such as me. I hate you because you are rich, and because you don't care who starves so long as you have plenty to eat, and to drink, and to wear, and to throw away. I feel as though I could kill you, and I may, too, if you don't go away, for I have the strength to do it now, although I am only a boy!"

"Upon my life I believe the boy is getting crazy," exclaimed Mr. Seymour, in a sort of half soliloquy.

"I believe I am," returned the boy, vehemently, "and it wouldn't be much to wonder at if I did. I wish I was crasy or dead, I wouldn't care which."

Mr. Seymour was about to make some conciliatory reply, but before he could do so the door opened, and a little girl about nine years of age entered, bearing in her hands a bowl of soup. She was a beautiful, bright-looking child, although her clothes were untidy, and her hair was uncombed, and fell straggling around her face. Her large blue eyes were full of gentleness and love, and an almost angelic look rested upon her meek, retiring countenance.

She was somewhat disconcerted upon discovering a stranger, but beckoning the boy to a corner, she said, in a whisper, while a smile of joy lighted up her little, thin face:

"Here, Charley, I've brought a bowl of real nice soup for your mother, and I know it'll do her good. Mrs. Maddox, who lives up stairs, gave it to me for fetching her a pail of water, but I'm not hungry, and it will be so nice for your poor mother!"

The boy's lip quivered as he struggled to subdue some terrible emotion, and he answered, at last, in a husky voice:

"She don't want it, Maggie—I know she don't—you eat it yourself."

"Who is that gentleman?" whispered the girl, at the same time stealing a glance at Mr. Seymour.

"He is a rich man," answered the boy aloud, "who lives in a grand house up town."

"Oh, I am so glad!" exclaimed the girl, joyously, "for I am sure he will do something for your mother!"

"Of course I will, my little lady," said Mr. Seymour; "that is what I came here for."

"No you won't!" exclaimed the boy, bitterly, "because you can't help her now! If you had only given me five cents when I first asked you for it, it might, perhaps, have done some good, but it's too late now. Look at her!"

And again throwing himself face downward upon the bed, he gave way to another passionate outburst of grief.

A terrible suspicion flashed across the mind of the millionaire, whose eyes by this time had become accustomed to the moderate light, and looking directly at the woman, God of Heaven, what a sight broke upon his startled vision! A sight to melt the most unpitying heart—a sight to thrill the stoutest breast with terror—a sight to send the swift blood back to its beating source—a sight to make humanity weep tears of bloody—a sight to well-nigh pierce the eyes which gazed upon it, or to craze the mind which contemplated it—a sight which haunted the rich man for whole months afterwards—sleeping or waking—at the opera, the theatre, the ball-room—among his friends and in the domestic circle, it was present with him, and although it ceased with the lapse of time, to be a ruling thought, he did not entirely forget it to the day of his death.

"Merciful Heavens!" he exclaimed, holding his hands before his eyes to shut out the frightful spectacle, "she is dead!"

"Yes," sobbed the boy, "dead—dead—dead! And when they put her in the cold ground, I shall be alone—all alone! There will be no one to care for me then!"

While he was thus wildly lamenting, the lad had placed the bowl upon the rude table, and with the tears standing in her mild eyes, had advanced toward him. Kneeling beside him as the last despairing words left his lips, she threw her little white arms around his neck, and murmured, in a tone of mingled pathos and gentle reproach:

"No one, did you say, Charley? No one at all?"

Instantly the boy checked his violent grief, and looking up through his tears, he replied, as he affectionately pressed her hand:

"Oh, I forgot you, Maggie—I forgot you; but you mustn't blame me. I was thinking of nothing but her. It will be so very, very hard to see them take her away!"

By this time Mr. Seymour had recovered somewhat from the first shock which his feelings had sustained, and, approaching close to the corpse, he began to peruse the features attentively. A thrill of horror shook his frame as he did so, for, notwithstanding the change which death had made, he felt morally certain he had seen the face before under far different circumstances.

"What is your name, boy?" he asked, excitedly, turning toward the sorrowing lad.

The boy was stubborn and would not answer, but his little companion replied:

"His name is Charley Hollister, Sir."

"I thought so!" groaned the rich man, and then he mentally ejaculated, while a spasmodic shudder shook him and large beads of perspiration stood out upon his forehead: "Can it be possible that the extraordinary ideas put forth by psychologists are true to the full extent of such teachings? Have I been drawn hither by some kind of mental alchemy—some subtle magnetic sympathy which existed between her mind and my own, before the breath had left her body?"

Again he gazed long and earnestly at the face of the dead woman, till at length, satisfied beyond the possibility of a doubt that he had fully made out her identity, a groan of anguish, followed by a deep-drawn sigh, burst from him, as he exclaimed:

"It is her, and we have met again at last, but under what terrible circumstances! Oh, what a frightful, frightful death for her to die!"

He spoke truly. It was a frightful death, for the woman had died of starvation! Starvation in the midst of plenty! Eager to appease the frightful cravings of hunger she had seized the loaf and torn from it a mouthful, but even as she essayed to masticate it, the fatal reaction took place, death seized her in the effort, and she who had once tasted the sweets of affluence, now sat there the victim of cruel want, a stiffened corpse, grim, gaunt and ghastly!

Casting a look at the children, who, in their great grief had not noticed his agitation, the millionaire rushed from the house and took his way toward the Coroner's office.

CHAPTER II.
A NEW PHILOSOPHY.

The next chapter introduces two new characters, viz: Phil. the Philosopher, a genius who judges of the characteristics of individuals by what they eat; and Bridget Mullips, a kind-hearted Irish woman, who is strongly opposed to this philosophy, or, in fact, to philosophy of any kind. We quote:

"And so the fine gentleman has offered to find a place for you, has he, Charley, dear?" asked the widow, addressing the deceased woman's son, after she had entirely recovered her equanimity.

The poor boy, who, absorbed in his deep grief, sat in an out-of-the-way corner, did not hear her, and little Maggie once more became his mouth-piece.

"Don't speak to him now, Mrs. Mullins, please don't," pleaded the little creature—"he feels so bad he don't want to talk. I know all about it, and I'll answer your questions. Mr. Seymour has offered to find a place for Charley—I heard him."

"Well, he's the dhroll gentleman, anyhow," said the widow—"before the berrin' took place, I offered him three dollars, which I had collected from the tenants to help to pay the expenses, and that does he do only pushes the money back, and whips me a tin dollar gold piece out av' his pocket to be divided among them that had subscribed. Troth he must have lashins av' lavins av' money."

"That man," broke in Phil. Ferry, who had left his washing-tub fortress and again ventured to join the group "that man lives on green turtle. I examined him carefully at the inquest, and I could see turtle soup in his eye, turtle freccasee in his mouth, and turtle steaks in his stomach. If he lives five years longer, one shell will begin to sprout from his shoulder blades, and another from his sternum, while his head will sink so far down into his chest that only the top of it will be visible. He will—"

"Arrah, howl!" interposed Mrs Mullins. "bad manners to ye, ye are ten thousand times worse nor a Irish-man's poll-parr

It is surrounded and divided up by double-faced stone walls. There is a great amount of the choicest kinds of fruit on the premises. The farm will be sold either in parcels to suit purchasers, or in one plot at private sale. If not sold by the 19th day of April it will on that day be sold at public auction, at 1 o'clock P. STATEMENT OF THE ST. NICHOLAS BANK—As

NEW-YORK CITY.

The Construction of the New Turkish Frigate.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

It is reported, in this City, that the United States Government will recommend the appointment of a U. S. Naval Engineer to superintend the designing and construction of the machinery for the steam frigate which the Turkish officers, lately arrived in this country, are about contracting for. This movement may seem, to the unitiated, a mark of courtesy, on our part, to the Turkish Government, but it is in reality a gross imposition, and if carried out, can hardly fail to prove very detrimental to the interest of the Turks.

The truth is, our Navy at present can boast of but very little talent among her engineers in the way of designing and constructing marine machinery. The few connected therewith, who are at all capable of making the requisite plans and calculations, have been out of practice so long, and have become so "Old Fogyish" in their ideas, that anything emanating from their brains could hardly keep pace with the productions of our "Marine Engine-Building Establishments," when managed by our practical engineers, (not brokers or lawyers,) and untrammeled by the whims and notions of the aforementioned "Old Fogy Officials."

There are some two or three establishments in this country, of very old standing, which must necessarily have had a long and varied experience, and which have not yet suffered their reputation to be stained by bringing forth such monstrous specimens as those with which, in one or two instances within the past year, our country has been disgraced. If experience and an unblemished reputation are anything, then it would seem that those who possess the greatest amount of both are the best prepared to design and execute so important an undertaking as the fitting out of a frigate with efficient steam machinery,—and it is therefore to be hoped that this job will fall into the hands of some competent marine engine builder, whose good judgment will enable him to avoid all traps in the shape of "patent boilers," wonderful "steam saving valves," etc., and produce something about which there can be no humbug, and whose highest aim will be to establish the reputation of the American Engineers upon a sure foundation.

One word in regard to the construction of the ship: Here again, for the credit of all concerned, it is very desirable that our Government Naval Architects should not interfere. They have enough to keep them all engaged if they properly superintend the war steam-sloops and other vessels now being constructed at the several Navy Yards. This is their legitimate field of labor, and for the honor of the nation let them devote all their energies to it, and strive to bring forth something which will reflect more credit upon our Navy than anything they have yet accomplished, leaving to the New-York ship-builders and engineers (men who have already made their mark by producing such vessels as the Vanderbilt and others of her class) the honor of furnishing the Turkish Government with a ship that will bear the criticisms of the world.
